

Richard A Anderson MD PhD FRCOG FRCP(Ed)

Richard Anderson is Elsie Inglis Professor of Clinical Reproductive Science at the University of Edinburgh and co-Director of the MRC Centre for Reproductive Health. He trained in Edinburgh, with Subspecialty training in Reproductive Medicine with David Baird. He works clinically in Infertility and Reproductive Endocrinology, and provides a specialist endocrinology service to the Edinburgh Gender Identity Clinic. He has interests in both female and male fertility, with a major aspect of this being fertility preservation and the effects of cancer treatments on fertility. He was Chair of the ESHRE guideline group on Fertility Preservation in Women, and founder Coordinator of the Special Interest Group in Fertility Preservation. He is a member of the ESHRE Executive Committee and the HFEA Scientific and Clinical Advances Advisory Committee.